Milliken Contract announced as a best green company by The Sunday Times

For the second year running, Milliken Contract has secured its place among the top green companies in the UK. Rated 13th in the list ahead of companies such as BBC Worldwide, HSBC, BT Group and the Building Research Establishment, The Sunday Times has cited Milliken Contract as being 'at the forefront of good environmental management'.

The Sunday Times 60 Best Green Companies is now in its third year and the quality of entries was higher than ever, with only the organisations demonstrating the highest environmental standards making it onto the list.

Establishing itself as an industry benchmark, The Sunday Times partners with environmental consultants Bureau Veritas and data analysts Munro Global to not only analyse the environmental performance of the company, but also employee engagement in green policies. The results are revealed at an annual awards ceremony and published in The Sunday Times.

Milliken Contract has once again ranked in the fiercely competitive listing underlining that its holistic vision of good environmental stewardship – Eco360 – is not only present in its Carbon Neutral carpet tiles, but is also inherent in the day-to-day working environment and mind of employees.

"We are delighted to have been ranked in the 60 Best Green Companies for the second year running," comments John Wakefield, Sales Director, Milliken Contract. "This list has fast built a reputation for showcasing the very best environmentally-focused companies and it is testament to our approach to sustainability that we continue to be ranked among the top manufacturing businesses in the UK."
